

Men and Money

Top Ten Takeaways

- 1 Men just want to know they command your respect in spite of the fact that they make less money than you.
- 2 It's not your job to perpetually convince an insecure man that he's good enough for you.
- 3 Be humble about being able to afford nice things. Ascribe your financial success to a choice, not a character issue.
- 4 If you can embrace him for all his other great qualities, he'll feel safe and secure with you. You'll see a better man and a better boyfriend.
- 5 While men don't marry women for their money, they do want to know that a woman won't be a drain on their finances.
- 6 Men want to do nice things for women they care about, but paying for dates with strangers isn't always particularly rewarding.
- 7 Having money doesn't preclude a man from being a really bad partner.
- 8 Some men have a blind spot about money. He'll spend on an iPhone and not a movie ticket.
- 9 Enter money discussions as if they are problems to solve as a team, instead of attacking or pointing fingers.
- 10 Share in your financial expenses based on your ability to pay, not on your gender.
